

Feedback from evaluations

Feedback from evaluations

Consider the following feedback when thinking about how to make the most of your link.

Think about the class or the student you are linked with, and how your communication affects them.

Feedback from schools

“Our student has posted blogs that the pupils are really keen to read and they ask me lots of questions about what she is experiencing.

They are definitely interested in keeping up to date with the progress she is making and what she is up to. I think that if she had not visited the school before heading off to France then this interest would not be there.”

Feedback from schools

“Every time I mention that we have received a message from our student, the pupils smile and are keen to see what he has written, to see his pictures.

It is obviously a distraction from the "more traditional lessons" but there is more than that. He gives us glimpses of his life and he writes about the culture.”

Feedback from schools

“ The class is interested in what she has to tell them each month and I can see a positive impact on their enthusiasm for the French language.

I'm sorry to say that I have only this month been able to reply to the student but now we are off and running she should hear from us frequently.”

Feedback from students

“As I always want to have a lot of content for my class I tend to wait until I can write something interesting about travel and experiences, etc, as opposed to a basic blog entry. So far this hasn't been a problem as my class takes a while to get around to the blogs and in posting their comments as well.”

Feedback from students

“I have found that blogging once a month is the best for me and is not a huge time commitment. The impact it has had on my experience abroad is quite tangible: whenever I do something new (even if it is as small a thing as trying a new flavour of ice cream!)

I try to take photos of it because I think to myself ‘the kids in Scotland would love to see this’ so for my own memories it has been great! ”

Feedback from students

“I don't know the level of the class or what the teacher expects from this link, which makes it hard to improve the content of my posts.

I was very happy when the class commented on two of my posts. I wish I had more feedback.”

Feedback from students

“I have been updating my blog regularly but I haven't heard anything back from the school I am in contact with.

Sometimes it is easy to make time for the blog posts but especially now as I have multiple deadlines and exams is getting a bit harder.”