

International School Partnerships Scotland: Exploring International Opportunities for Scottish Schools

Inspiration, Creativity and Collaboration

Friday 19 January 2024

09.30-15.30

at the SCILT Headquarters in Glasgow

If you see Scotland as a place where the transformative potential of international education should be valued, nurtured, and experienced by all, come and join us!

A series of workshops will be led by experienced teachers, education officers and international education experts.

This one-day symposium will equip you with everything you need to develop your international ambitions. Whether you want to explore sustainable curriculum partnerships, staff development, pupil mobility travel advice, virtual links or opportunities to exchange best practice, this event has something for you and your situation!

You'll learn from the experiences of schools who have managed thriving partnerships, undertaken successful international pupil visits, and who have developed learning and teaching with an international dimension.

We will explore funding strategies, support for finding international partners and digital tools for exchange and collaboration and provide support to develop consortium bids.

You will also hear how international education can enhance leadership skills and contribute to school mentoring and improvement planning.

We want to build confidence, share expertise, and support your school on its journey to becoming a centre of excellence in international education.

We aim to:

- Increase the capacity of international school partnerships to realise inclusion and develop learners' employability, intercultural and communication skills to meet the needs of Scotland as an outward looking international community.

- Offer equity of access to international school partnerships.
- Enhance understanding of the value of international school partnerships in transforming learning experiences and supporting the school's broader educational aims for all learners.
- Provide high quality training in the implementation of international school partnerships within the Scottish curriculum – during and after our one-day event.

Book your place by Wednesday 20 December
