

MEDICINE

A challenging, rewarding and fulfilling career

Are YOU...?

- ✓ caring and compassionate?
- ✓ a superb communicator?
- ✓ committed and conscientious?
- ✓ willing to work long hours in a very demanding environment?
- ✓ comfortable with exams and long study periods?
- ✓ reliable, professional and trustworthy?

Do YOU have...?

- ✓ lots of patience?
- ✓ a strong stomach?
- ✓ a talent for science?
- ✓ a broad range of interests?

...then this COULD BE YOU!

Learn another LANGUAGE
to add to your skills
in this highly competitive field

How?

Think about:

- ✓ Gaining work experience e.g. in a local hospital – this is essential when applying for Medicine or Nursing or any other medical discipline
- ✓ Getting A Levels in Maths, Biology and another Science, at least 1 other AS level, GCSEs in English or Welsh, Maths and Science – note that most universities require very high grades in all subjects in order to get a place
- ✓ Demonstrating that you have a broad range of interests – languages are ideal for showing that you have an understanding of other cultures and that you have excellent communication skills

Think Languages:

“Although I don’t specifically use my A Level French in my every day work, the communication and logic skills you gain from learning a language are extremely useful in what can be a very stressful work place. My job means I deal with people from all sorts of different backgrounds on a daily basis and being culturally aware helps with that.”
